Free Health Department Workshop for Lexington Food Establishments!

Learn about:

- Reducing toxics usage—cleaners, sanitizers, pesticides, and more
- Proposed health regulations on toxics and pest management
- Chemical safety and health concerns for food establishments

The Lexington Health Department will be holding free workshops on health and safety concerns related to chemical usage in food establishments. The workshops will provide information and training on toxics usage and reduction, and occupational safety concerns for food service workers who are exposed to toxic chemicals, including pesticides. In addition, each workshop will offer your establishment the chance to provide input on a proposed new health regulation regarding chemicals and pest management practices.

Please contact the Health Department (Ext. 200) to reserve spaces for you and your staff at one of the following workshops. All workshops will be held at the Town Office Building, 1625 Massachusetts Avenue, Lexington.

Workshop Schedule:

March 11, 2002	2:00 – 4:00 p.m.	Selectmen's Meeting Room
March 13, 2002	7:30 - 9:30 a.m.	Selectmen's Meeting Room
March 18, 2002	7:30 - 9:30 a.m.	Room G15

We look forward to meeting you at the workshop, and encourage you to learn more about this very important subject for food service managers.

Trainings funded through a grant from the Toxics Use Reduction Institute, UMASS Lowell.
